REGINNING OF THE CHANGE. Love went at the execution of his ideas, He put out a small orchard. He had to wait four years for the first crop and then, hough the yield was as abundant as could e expected in any country, people said that was an off year and that the next year here would be a failure. The experiments of Mr. Love had become a matter of common talk far and wide among the men who had been watching the result; because they had become convinced that so far as East Texas was concerned something would have to be done as long as cotton sold at a cents a pound. There were in the year 1925 many orchards and gardens put out. The orchards required time and track farming was not profitable as long as there was no organization for systematic disposal in shipment.

The few men who had begun to plant truck brought their vegetables to town and sold them outright to commission agents or turned them over for shipment, with the agreement to allow a commission on the sale at whatever price was secured in the St. Louis market.

DIFFICULTY IN SHIPPING. experiments of Mr. Love had become

DIFFICULTY IN SHIPPING. With the poor arrangements for shipping and the disposition of an occasional firm to take advantage of a seller who was not on the ground, the profit was very uncertain and usually unsatisfactory.

After a year or two the farmer tried shipping his crop himself. This was as unsatisfactory as the first plan, for the reason that the farmer had no facilities for ascertaining market conditions, was unacquainted with shipping methods and therefore at a disadvantage in disposing of his product that are up the profits which should have been his and often left him in debt on the consignment.

The fields were small and for the fields were small and consignment.

The fields were small and few planters had enough of any product to 511 a car. When there was a combination of two or more to make a quick shipment there was often a dispute as to where the stuff should second year's experience would have been fatal to the fruit and vegetable in-dustry if the soil had not been found so extraordinarily productive and the planter would have gone back to raising cotton, which always found a ready market, and in the disposal of which there was no risk of loss in shipment.

FARMERS ORGANIZE.

The American Refrigerating Company's agent, Mr. Rice, who had been attempting to get the farmers along the railroad to organize, was working out a plan which promfeed ultimate success, but the planter had to become accustomed to new motheds and learn that there is as much in shipping as or more than there is in growing the crop.

At this juncture Wessey Love agreed to take the product of all farmers in reach of the Jacksonville market, ship it with his own and, after deducting the expense, turn over to the product the balance. own and, after deducing the expense, turn over to the producer the balance.

There has never been a hill in the boom in East Texas since that time. The area in fruit and vegetables has increased rapidly every year and cotten is corresponding. In selected, Farmers have come to realize the folly of raising cotton at $20 to $55 an acre when, with less trouble, they can sell the tomatoes or polatices or celery or strawberries on the same ground for ten times as much.

A return of $15 to $10 an acre in peaches or tomatoes is not timeounnon, and the A return of 545 to 550 an acre in peaches of terminates is not uncommon, and the names of the men who realize these amounts every year can be obtained by the dozen from the men mentioned or from any one who is acquainted with the conditions in this part of the State.

No more remarkable advance in all the westerful activity that began in the great Southwest ten years ago can be found than the awakening in East Texas.
